LawHelp available

A new legal service is available to help not-for-profit CATSI Act corporations to conduct their business.

Started by the Registrar of Indigenous Corporations and volunteer lawyers from the Australian Government Solicitor, LawHelp can help corporations with requests regarding:

- interpretation of the law
- drafting, negotiating and managing contracts
- employment issues like workers' compensation, employment contracts and occupational health and safety matters
- tax obligations
- intellectual property arrangements
- real property matters.

Guidelines and an application form for applying for LawHelp are available on the ORIC website in the training and support section.

Applications are assessed by a panel and, if successful, will be passed on to a lawyer who will then contact the corporation.

If the corporation's application falls outside the scope of LawHelp, it will be returned with a written explanation for the reasons behind the decision, and possible alternatives for assistance.

Areas that LawHelp does not cover include: native title matters, legal action in a court or tribunal and matters of potential conflict for the Australian Government such as Commonwealth funding agreements and Indigenous land use agreements.

You can get assistance with applications from the LawHelp secretariat on 1800 622 431 (not free from mobiles) or by emailing LawHelp@oric.gov.au.

New checklist makes compliance easier

Corporations now have a new tool to help meet important obligations and keep track of compliance requirements.

The Healthy Corporation Checklist contains template documents such as notices of meetings and forms for updating information with the Registrar.

There are also checklists relating to people management, strategic planning and other issues that may be faced by corporations.

'This is a very useful tool which I know will become popular,' the Registrar, Anthony Beven, said.

'ORIC welcomes feedback from corporations using the checklist so it can be updated and tailored to best meet the needs of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander corporations.'

Peter Armstrong, Director of ORIC's Regulation Section, said the response from corporations since the checklist was launched in June, has been very positive.

'It's a really valuable guide for corporate governance and I think it's one of the best things ORIC has produced for a number of years.'

The healthy corporation checklist is available from the ORIC website.

Reports are now due

All corporations, whatever their registered size and income, must lodge reports with the Registrar every year. Reports for the 2009–10 financial year are now due. Corporations should have recently received an email or letter from ORIC outlining their current registered size and the corporation's 2009–10 reporting requirements.

Corporations can complete their reports by logging onto ORIC's secure online lodgment page, <https://online.oric.gov.au>, or lodge in hard copy.

Don't be late: This year, the Registrar's compliance campaign is focusing on large and medium corporations that do not lodge reports. Large and medium corporations that fail to lodge their 2009–10 reports by 31 December 2010 could face prosecution, along with secretaries of large corporations. Under the CATSI Act the maximum penalties for each report not lodged are $13 750 for corporations and $550 for secretaries.

Make sure you get your reports right and lodged on time. For further information on CATSI Act reporting requirements visit www.oric.gov.au, or if you need help with lodging your reports contact ORIC on freecall 1800 622 431 (not free from mobiles) or email info@oric.gov.au.

Up to 120 Delegates will begin work on setting the agenda for the National Congress at this meeting and nominations are now open.

The Annual Forum of 120 delegates will be organised into 3 chambers. The Forum makes decisions on policies and issues affecting our peoples and advises the National Executive on the future direction and priorities for the organisation. Each Chamber will have 40 delegates, incorporating an equal gender balance, made up of 3 Categories:

More information will be available on how to vote, when nominees have been confirmed.

CO-CHAIRS

The fulltime elected positions of Co-Chairs (female and male) will lead the National Executive and the Congress.

These leaders must be of the highest quality and integrity to undertake the enormous responsibilities of representing the interests of our members across Australia.

DELEGATES

Delegates to the National Congress, will have the opportunity to participate in the development of a national policy agenda for Indigenous issues and be part of a new and exciting organisation that will advocate on behalf of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples across the country.

More information on the roles and responsibilities of Co-Chairs and Delegates is available in the nomination information packs on our website – www.nationalcongress.com.au

HOW DO I NOMINATE?

What is the Congress?

“ The Congress will create a national and collective voice, conduct research, be a partner for government and industry, a think tank for our issues and our peoples. ”

Sam Jeffries, Congress Co-Chair

A National Voice

The establishment of the National Congress of Australia's First Peoples is the culmination of years of hard work to re-create a national Indigenous representative body. The Congress has been established as a Company Limited by Guarantee and was incorporated in April 2010.

Our Vision is to be a national leader and advocate for recognising the status of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as First Nation peoples.

About the National Congress

The final Model for the Congress is based on:

- the highest standards of professionalism and objectivity
- clear principles and ethics: integrity, honesty, accountability, transparency, openness, participation and inclusion, being informed
- a non-government organisation
- an organisation which will raise corporate and philanthropic support and funds

The National Congress will:

- advocate for the recognition of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' rights
- work towards securing an economic, social, cultural and environmental future for our peoples
- build new relationships with government, industry and among communities
- have fair and diverse membership, guarantee gender balance for delegates and office holders
- ensure participation from youth, urban, regional and remote communities
- encourage new leadership
- grow and change based on decisions made by our members – Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

The National Congress will not:

- provide service delivery or funding for public programs
- have representatives or memberships who are hand-picked by government
- be dependent upon the good will of parliament or the government of the day

Financial Sustainability

The Congress aims to become financially sustainable by raising funds, and gaining sponsorships. The Australian Government has committed $30 million to the establishment and operation to 2013.

“ We are promising to deliver a vehicle for our aspirations and visions – not an overnight fix or that would have been realised already. This is a long term proposition. ”

Dr Kerry Arabena, Congress Co-Chair
